Attorneys for Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

(HONORABLE MARILYN L. HUFF)

MELVIN ALFARO-ZUNIGA,) STATEMENT OF FACTS AND POINTS AND ) AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTIONS Defendant.)

I.

STATEMENT OF FACTS¹

On April 1, 2008, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga was arrested at the Highway 86 Border Patrol checkpoint north of Westmorland, California. The events leading to the arrest were as follows.

At approximately 10:54 p.m. on April 1, 2008, a white 2000 Peterbilt semi-truck pulling a 2004 Dorse trailer arrived at the Highway 86 Border Patrol checkpoint.² United States Border Patrol Agent Rene Martinez asked the driver about his right to be in the United States, and then repeated the question when he hesitated in responding. Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga told Agent Martinez that he is a citizen of El Salvador and ¹ The following statement of facts is based on the probable cause statement provided by the government, the accuracy to which defense counsel cannot attest.

² The Highway 86 Border Patrol checkpoint is not located at the United States / Mexico border. It is a permanent immigration checkpoint that is located approximately 36 air miles north of the border. See Bowen v. United States, 422 U.S. 916, 917 (1975) (“The] traffic checkpoint on California Highway 86 [is] about 36 air miles north of the Mexican border.”).

1 handed him a valid United States Work Authorization document. Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga also provided Agent
2 Martinez with the cargo manifest for the items in the attached trailer. Agent Martinez reported that 3 Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga fumbled some of his documents and his voice would “crackle” during their 4 conversation.

5 At that time, Canine Agent T. Delgado relayed to Agent Martinez that his assigned canine partner
6 alerted to the trailer. Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga was sent to secondary inspection and when Agents conducted a
7 search of the sealed trailer, they discovered twenty individuals inside. Among them were the three material
8 witnesses, Sergio De La Cruz-Cervantes, Andres Vizcaino-Galarza, and Diego Mora-Ricon. None of the 9 material witnesses were able to identify Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga as the driver of the truck.

10 On April 23, 2008, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga was indicted by a federal grand jury, which charged him with 11 violations of 8 U.S.C. §§ 1324(a)(1)(A)(ii) and (v)(II), and aiding and abetting. He entered a plea of not 12 guilty on all counts. These motions follow.

13 II.

14 MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY

15 Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga was arrested on April 1, 2008. Defense counsel spoke with government counsel
16 requesting discovery and followed up with a letter dated April 8, 2008 memorializing the request.
17 Although Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga has since received some discovery, he hereby moves to compel production 18 of the specific discovery set out below.

19 First, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga requests that the Court compel production of a copy of the cargo manifest
20 that Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga provided to the arresting agents upon being stopped at the Highway 86 checkpoint.

21 Second, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga requests copies of the registration documents for the 2000 Peterbilt truck
22 and the 2004 Dorse trailer.

23 Third, because the government produced the investigatory still photographs taken with respect to 24 this case in black-and-white photocopy form, many of those photos are indiscernible. Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga
25 requests that the Court compel production of color photographs, either in disc or paper form.

26 Fourth, additional items were collected from the truck and trailer driven by Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga. He 27 requests that the Court order the government to provide an inventory indicating from where items were 28 seized.

1 Fifth, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga requests that the Court compel production of a recording of the telephone
 2 conversation between Special Agent Michael Dockery of the Drug Enforcement Administration and Agent
 3 Delgado on April 1, 2008, during which Agent Dockery relayed the details of his surveillance of the white
 4 semi-truck and trailer during the two hours leading up to the arrest.

5 Finally, defense counsel will want to inspect and photograph the 2000 Peterbilt truck and the 2004
 6 Dorse trailer. He asks that the Court enter an order for the government to make reasonable
 7 accommodations in that regard. A proposed order has been attached to this filing to facilitate this 8 request.

9 III.

10 THIS COURT SHOULD ORDER PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE

11 Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga requests the preservation of all physical evidence in this case. This includes any 12 evidence that may be destroyed, lost, or otherwise put out of the possession, custody, or care of the 13 government (or its private contractors) in this case. United States v. Riley, 189 F.3d 802, 806-08
 14 (9th Cir.1999). This request includes, but is not limited to: (1) Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga's personal effects; (2)
 15 the agents' rough notes; (3) any radio or telephone communication, if it is recorded; (3) any videotape taken 16 of Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga involving this case, including surveillance video; (4) any evidence seized from the 17 defendant or any third party (i.e., material witnesses, co-defendants); and (5) the vehicle in this case.
 18 Defendant requests that government counsel be ordered to notify the agencies and private contractors with 19 custody of such evidence of the Court's preservation order.

21 THE INDICTMENT SHOULD BE DISMISSED BECAUSE JUDGE BURNS' 22 INSTRUCTIONS AS A WHOLE PROVIDED TO THE JANUARY 2007 GRAND JURY RUN 23 AFOUL OF BOTH NAVARRO-VARGAS AND WILLIAMS AND VIOLATE THE FIFTH AMENDMENT BY DEPRIVING MR. ALFARO-ZUNIGA OF THE TRADITIONAL FUNCTIONING OF THE GRAND JURY

24 A. Introduction.

25 The indictment in the instant case was returned by the January 2007 grand jury. See Clerk's Record
 26 at 6. That grand jury was instructed by Judge Burns on January 11, 2007. See Reporter's Partial Transcript
 27 of the Proceedings, dated January 11, 2007 (Exhibit A hereto). Judge Burns' instructions to the impaneled
 28 grand jury deviate from the instructions at issue in the major Ninth Circuit cases challenging a form grand jury instruction previously given in this district in several ways.³ These instructions compounded Judge Burns' erroneous instructions and comments to prospective grand jurors during voir dire of the grand jury panel, which immediately preceded the instructions at Ex. A. See Reporter's Transcript of Proceedings, dated January 11, 2007 (Exhibit B hereto).

1. Judge Burns Instructed Grand Jurors That Their Singular Duty Is to Determine Whether or Not Probable Cause Exists and That They Have No Right to Decline to Indict When the Probable Cause Standard Is Satisfied

After repeatedly emphasizing to the grand jurors that probable cause determination was their sole responsibility, see Exh. A at 3, 3-4, 5,⁴ Judge Burns instructed the grand jurors that they were forbidden "from judg[ing] the wisdom of the criminal laws enacted by Congress; that is, whether or not there should be a federal law or should not be a federal law designating certain activity [as] criminal is not up to you." See id. at 8. The instructions go beyond that, however, and tell the grand jurors that, should "you disagree with that judgment made by Congress, then your option is not to say 'well, I'm going to vote against indicting even though I think that the evidence is sufficient' or 'I'm going to vote in favor of even though the evidence may be insufficient.'" See id. at 8-9. Thus, the instruction flatly bars the grand jury from declining to indict because the grand jurors disagree with a proposed prosecution.

Immediately before limiting the grand jurors' powers in the way just described, Judge Burns referred to an instance in the grand juror selection process in which it excused three potential jurors. See id. at 8.

I've gone over this with a couple of people. You understood from the questions and answers that a couple of people were excused, I think three in this case, because they could not adhere to the principle that I'm about to tell you.

Id. That "principle" was Judge Burns' discussion of the grand jurors' inability to give effect to their disagreement with Congress. See id. at 8-9. Thus, Judge Burns not only instructed the grand jurors on its view of their discretion; it enforced that view on pain of being excused from service as a grand juror.

³ See, e.g., United States v. Cortez-Rivera, 454 F.3d 1038 (9th Cir. 2006); United States v. Navarro-Vargas, 408 F.3d 1184 (9th Cir.) (en banc), cert. denied, 126 S. Ct. 736 (2005) (Navarro-Vargas II); United States v. Navarro-Vargas, 367 F.3d 896 (9th Cir. 2004) (Navarro-Vargas I); United States v. Marcucci, 299 F.3d 1156 (9th Cir. 2002) (per curiam).

⁴ See also id. at 20 ("You're all about probable cause.").

1 Examination of the recently disclosed voir dire transcript, which contains additional instructions and
2 commentary in the form of the give and take between Judge Burns and various prospective grand jurors,
3 reveals how Judge Burns' emphasis of the singular duty is to determine whether or not probable cause exists
4 and its statement that grand jurors they cannot judge the wisdom of the criminal laws enacted by Congress
5 merely compounded an erroneous series of instructions already given to the grand jury venire. In one of 6 its earliest substantive remarks, Judge Burns makes clear that the grand jury's sole function is probable 7 cause determination.

8 [T]he grand jury is determining really two factors: "do we have a reasonable belief that a
9 crime was committed? And second, do we have a reasonable belief that the person that they propose that we indict committed the crime?"

10 If the answer is "yes" to both of those, then the case should move forward. If the answer to 11 either of the questions is "no," then the grand jury should not hesitate and not indict.

12 See Ex. B at 8. In this passage, Judge Burns twice uses the term "should" in a context makes clear that the 13 term is employed to convey instruction: "should" cannot reasonably be read to mean optional when it 14 addresses the obligation not to indict when the grand jury has no "reasonable belief that a crime was 15 committed" or if it has no "reasonable belief that the person that they propose that we indict committed the 16 crime."

17 Equally revealing are Judge Burns' interactions with two potential grand jurors who indicated that,
18 in some unknown set of circumstances, they might decline to indict even where there was probable cause.
19 Because of the redactions of the grand jurors' names, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga will refer to them by occupation.
20 One is a retired clinical social worker (hereinafter CSW), and the other is a real estate agent (hereinafter 21 REA). The CSW indicated a view that no drugs should be considered illegal and that some drug 22 prosecutions were not an effective use of resources. See id. at 16. The CSW was also troubled by certain 23 unspecified immigration cases. See id.

24 Judge Burns made no effort to determine what sorts of drug and immigration cases troubled the 25 CSW. It never inquired as to whether the CSW was at all troubled by the sorts of cases actually filed in 26 this district, such as drug smuggling cases and cases involving reentry after deportation and alien 27 smuggling. Rather, it provided instructions suggesting that, in any event, any scruples CSW may have 28 possessed were simply not capable of expression in the context of grand jury service.

1 Now, the question is can you fairly evaluate [drug cases and immigration cases]? Just as the 2 defendant is ultimately entitled to a fair trial and the person that's accused is entitled to a fair
 3 appraisal of the evidence of the case that's in front of you, so, too, is the United States entitled 4 to a fair judgment. If there's probable cause, then the case should go forward. I wouldn't want you to say, "well, yeah, there's probable cause, but I still don't like what our government is doing. I disagree with these laws, so I'm not going to vote for it to go forward." If that is your frame of mind, the probably you shouldn't serve. Only you can tell me that.

5 See id. at 16-17 (emphasis added). Thus, without any sort of context whatsoever, Judge Burns let the grand
 6 juror know that it would not want him or her to decline to indict in an individual case where the grand juror
 7 "[didn't] like what our government is doing," see id. at 17, but in which there was probable cause. See Id.
 8 Such a case "should go forward." See id. Given that blanket proscription on grand juror discretion, made
 9 manifest by Judge Burns' use of the pronoun "I", the CSW indicated that it "would be difficult to support
 10 a charge even if [the CSW] thought the evidence warranted it." See id. Again, Judge Burns' question 11 provided no context; Judge Burns inquired regarding "a case," a term presumably just as applicable to 12 possession of a small amount of medical marijuana as kilogram quantities of methamphetamine for 13 distribution. Any grand juror listening to this exchange could only conclude that there was no case in 14 which Judge Burns would permit them to vote "no bill" in the face of a showing probable cause.

15 Just in case there may have been a grand juror that did not understand his or her inability to exercise
 16 anything like prosecutorial discretion, Judge Burns drove the point home in its exchange with REA. REA
 17 first advised Judge Burns of a concern regarding the "disparity between state and federal law" regarding 18 "medical marijuana." See id. at 24. Judge Burns first sought to address REA's concerns about medical 19 marijuana by stating that grand jurors, like trial jurors, are simply forbidden from taking penalty
 20 considerations into account.

21 Well, those things -- the consequences of your determination shouldn't concern you in the 22 sense that penalties or punishment, things like that -- we tell trial jurors, of course, that they 23 cannot consider the punishment or the consequence that Congress has set for these things.
 We'd ask you to also abide by that. We want you to make a business-like decision of whether there was a probable cause. . . .

24 Id. at 24-25. Having stated that REA was to "abide" by the instruction given to trial jurors, Judge Burns
 25 went on to suggest that REA recuse him or herself from medical marijuana cases. See id. at 25.

26 In response to further questioning, REA disclosed REA's belief "that drugs should be legal." See id.
 27 That disclosure prompted Judge Burns to begin a discussion that ultimately led to an instruction that a 28 grand juror is obligated to vote to indict if there is probable cause.

1 I can tell you sometimes I don't agree with some of the legal decisions that are indicated that 2 I have to make. But my alternative is to vote for someone different, vote for someone that 3 supports the policies I support and get the law changed. It's not for me to say, "well, I don't 4 like it. So I'm not going to follow it here."

5 You'd have a similar obligation as a grand juror even though you might have to grit your teeth
 6 on some cases. Philosophically, if you were a member of congress, you'd vote against, for 7 example, criminalizing marijuana. I don't know if that's it, but you'd vote against 8 criminalizing some drugs.

9 That's not what your prerogative is here. You're prerogative instead is to act like a judge and 10 say, "all right. This is what I've to deal with objectively. Does it seem to me that a crime 11 was committed? Yes. Does it seem to me that this person's involved? It does." And then 12 your obligation, if you find those to be true, would be to vote in favor of the case going 13 forward.

14 Id. at 26-27 (emphasis added). Thus, the grand juror's duty is to conduct a simple two part test, which, if 15 both questions are answered in the affirmative, lead to an "obligation" to indict.

16 Having set forth the duty to indict, and being advised that REA was "uncomfortable" with that 17 paradigm, Judge Burns then set about to ensure that there was no chance of a deviation from the obligation 18 to indict in every case in which there was probable cause.

19 The Court: Do you think you'd be inclined to let people go in drug cases even though you 20 were convinced there was probable cause they committed a drug offense?

21 REA: It would depend on the case.

22 The Court: Is there a chance that you would do that?

23 REA: Yes.

24 The Court: I appreciate your answers. I'll excuse you at this time.

25 Id. at 27. Two aspects of this exchange are crucial. First, REA plainly does not intend to act solely on his 26 political belief in decriminalization -- whether he or she would indict "depend[s] on the case," see id., as 27 it should. Because REA's vote "depend[s] on the case," see id., it is necessarily true that REA would vote
 28 to indict in some (perhaps many or even nearly all) cases in which there was probable cause. Again, Judge
 Burns made no effort to explore REA's views; it did not ascertain what sorts of cases would prompt REA to hesitate. The message is clear: it does not matter what type of case might prompt REA's reluctance to indict because, once the two part test is satisfied, the "obligation" is "to vote in favor of the case going forward."⁵ See id. at 27. That is why even the "chance," see id., that a grand juror might not vote to indict was too great a risk to run.

2. The Instructions Posit a Non-Existent Prosecutorial Duty to Offer Exculpatory Evidence.

In addition to its instructions on the authority to choose not to indict, Judge Burns also assured the grand jurors that prosecutors would present to them evidence that tended to undercut probable cause. See Ex. A at 20.⁶

Now, again, this emphasizes the difference between the function of the grand jury and the trial jury. You're all about probable cause. If you think that there's evidence out there that ⁵ This point is underscored by Judge Burns' explanation to the Grand Jury that a magistrate judge will have determined the existence of probable cause "in most circumstances" before it has been presented with any evidence. See Ex. A at 6. This instruction created an imprimatur of finding probable cause in each case because had a magistrate judge not so found, the case likely would not have been presented to the Grand Jury for indictment at all. The Grand Jury was informed that it merely was redundant to the magistrate court "in most circumstances." See id. This instruction made the grand jury more inclined to indict irrespective of the evidence presented.

⁶ These instructions were provided in the midst of several comments that praised the United States attorney's office and prosecutors in general. Judge Burns advised the grand jurors that they "can expect that the U.S. Attorneys that will appear in front of [them] will be candid, they'll be honest, and . . . they'll act in good faith in all matters presented to you." See Ex. A at 27. The instructions delivered during voir dire go even further. In addressing a prospective grand juror who revealed "a strong bias for the U.S. Attorney, whatever cases they might bring," see Ex. B at 38, Judge Burns affirmatively endorsed the prospective juror's view of the U.S. Attorney's office, even while purporting to discourage it: "frankly, I agree with the things you are saying. They make sense to me." See id. at 43. See also id. at 40 ("You were saying that you give a presumption of good faith to the U.S. Attorney and assume, quite logically, that they're not about the business of trying to indict innocent people or people that they believe to be innocent or the evidence doesn't substantiate the charges against.").

Judge Burns' discussion of once having been a prosecutor before the Grand Jury compounded the error inherent of praising the government attorneys. See Ex. A at 9-10. Judge Burns' instructions implied that as a prior prosecutor and current "jury liaison judge," see id. at 8, it would not allow the government attorneys to act inappropriately or to present cases for indictment where no probable cause existed.

In addition, while Judge Burns instructed the Grand Jury that it had the power to question witnesses, Judge Burns' instructions also told the Grand Jury that it should "be deferential to the U.S. Attorney if there is an instance where the U.S. Attorney thinks a question ought not to be asked." See Ex. A at 12. As the dissent in Navarro-Vargas pointed out, "the grand jury's independence is diluted by [such an] instruction, which encourages deference to prosecutors." Navarro-Vargas, 408 F.3d at 1215. The judge's admonition that his statement was only "advice," see Ex. A at 12, does not cure the error as courts regularly presume grand jurors follow instructions provided to them by the court. See id. at 1202, n.23 ("We must presume that grand jurors will follow instructions because, in fact, we are prohibited from examining jurors to verify whether they understood the instruction as given and then followed it.").

might cause you to say "well, I don't think probable cause exists," then it's incumbent upon you to hear that evidence as well. As I told you, in most instances, the U.S. Attorneys are duty-bound to present evidence that cuts against what they may be asking you to do if they're aware of that evidence.

Id. (emphasis added).

The antecedent to this instruction is also found in the voir dire. After advising the grand jurors that "the presentation of evidence to the grand jury is necessarily one-sided," see Ex. B at 14, Judge Burns gratuitously added that "[his] experience is that the prosecutors don't play hide-the-ball. If there's something adverse or that cuts against the charge, you'll be informed of that. They have a duty to do that." See id. Thus, Judge Burns unequivocally advised the grand jurors that the government would present any evidence that was "adverse" or "that cuts against the charge." See id.

B. Navarro-Vargas Establishes Limits on the Ability of Judges to Constrain the Powers of the Grand Jury, Which Judge Burns Far Exceeded in Its Instructions as a Whole During Impanelment.

The Ninth Circuit has, over vigorous dissents, rejected challenges to various instructions given to grand jurors in the Southern District of California. See Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d 1184. While the Ninth Circuit has thus far (narrowly) rejected such challenges, it has, in the course of adopting a highly formalistic approach⁷ to the problems posed by the instructions, endorsed many of the substantive arguments raised by the defendants in those cases. The district court's instructions cannot be reconciled with the role of the grand jury as set forth in Navarro-Vargas II. Taken together, the voir dire of and instructions given to the January 2007 Grand Jury, go far beyond those at issue in Navarro-Vargas, taking a giant leap in the direction of a bureaucratic, deferential grand jury, focused solely upon probable cause determinations and utterly unable to exercise any quasi-prosecutorial discretion. That is not the institution the Framers envisioned. See United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36, 49 (1992).

For instance, with respect to the grand jury's relationship with the prosecution, the Navarro-Vargas II majority acknowledges that the two institutions perform similar functions: "the public prosecutor, in deciding whether a particular prosecution shall be instituted or followed up, performs much the same function as a grand jury." Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d at 1200 (quoting Butz v. Economou, 438 U.S. 478, 510 (1978)). Accord United States v. Navarro-Vargas, 367 F.3d 896, 900 (9th Cir. 2004) (Navarro-Vargas I) (Kozinski, J., dissenting) (The grand jury's discretion in this regard "is most accurately described as prosecutorial."). See also Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d at 1213 (Hawkins, J., dissenting). It recognizes that the prosecutor is not obligated to proceed on any indictment or presentment returned by a grand jury, id., but also that "the grand jury has no obligation to prepare a presentment or to return an indictment drafted by the prosecutor." Id. See Niki Kuckes, The Democratic Prosecutor: Explaining the Constitutional Function of the Federal Grand Jury, 94 Geo. L.J. 1265, 1302 (2006) (the grand jury's discretion not to indict was "arguably . . . the most important attribute of grand jury review from the perspective of those who insisted that a grand jury clause be included in the Bill of Rights") (quoting Wayne LaFave et al., Criminal Procedure § 15.2(g) (2d ed. 1999)).

Indeed, the Navarro-Vargas II majority agrees that the grand jury possesses all the attributes set forth in Vasquez v. Hillery, 474 U.S. 254 (1986). See id.

The grand jury thus determines not only whether probable cause exists, but also whether to "charge a greater offense or a lesser offense; numerous counts or a single count; and perhaps most significant of all, a capital offense or a non-capital offense -- all on the basis of the same facts. And, significantly, the grand jury may refuse to return an indictment even "where a conviction can be obtained."

Id. (quoting Vasquez, 474 U.S. at 263). The Supreme Court has itself reaffirmed Vasquez's description of the grand jury's attributes in Campbell v. Louisiana, 523 U.S. 392 (1998), noting that the grand jury "controls not only the initial decision to indict, but also significant questions such as how many counts to charge and whether to charge a greater or lesser offense, including the important decision whether to charge a capital crime." Id. at 399 (citing Vasquez, 474 U.S. at 263). Judge Hawkins notes that the Navarro-Vargas II majority accepts the major premise of Vasquez: "the majority agrees that a grand jury has the power to refuse to indict someone even when the prosecutor has established probable cause that this individual has committed a crime." See id. at 1214 (Hawkins, J. dissenting). Accord Navarro-Vargas I, 367 F.3d at 899 (Kozinski, J., dissenting); United States v. Marcucci, 299 F.3d 1156, 1166-73 (9th Cir. 2002) (per curiam) (Hawkins, J., dissenting). In short, the grand jurors' prerogative not to indict enjoys strong support in the Ninth Circuit. But not in Judge Burns' instructions.

1 C. Judge Burns' Instructions Forbid the Exercise of Grand Jury Discretion Established in 2 Both Vasquez and Navarro-Vargas II.

3 The Navarro-Vargas II majority found that the instruction in that case "leave[s] room for the grand
 4 jury to dismiss even if it finds probable cause," 408 F.3d at 1205, adopting the analysis in its previous 5 decision in Marcucci. Marcucci reasoned that the instructions do not mandate that grand jurors indict upon 6 every finding of probable cause because the term "should" may mean "what is probable or expected." 299
 7 F.3d at 1164 (citation omitted). That reading of the term "should" makes no sense in context, as Judge
 8 Hawkins ably pointed out. See Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d at 1210-11 (Hawkins, J., dissenting) ("The 9 instruction's use of the word 'should' is most likely to be understood as imposing an inflexible 'duty or 10 obligation' on grand jurors, and thus to circumscribe the grand jury's constitutional independence."). See 11 also id. ("The 'word' should is used to express a duty [or] obligation.") (quoting The Oxford American 12 Diction and Language Guide 1579 (1999) (brackets in original)).

13 The debate about what the word "should" means is irrelevant here; the instructions here make no
 14 such fine distinction. The grand jury instructions make it painfully clear that grand jurors simply may not 15 choose not to indict in the event of what appears to them to be an unfair application of the law: should "you
 16 disagree with that judgment made by Congress, then your option is not to say 'well, I'm going to vote
 17 against indicting even though I think that the evidence is sufficient'...." See Ex. A at 8-9. Thus, the 18 instruction flatly bars the grand jury from declining to indict because they disagree with a proposed 19 prosecution. No grand juror would read this language as instructing, or even allowing, him or her to assess 20 "the need to indict." Vasquez, 474 U.S. at 264.

21 While Judge Burns used the word "should" instead of "shall" during voir dire with respect to whether 22 an indictment was required if probable cause existed, see Ex. B at 4, 8, n context, it is clear that it could 23 only mean "should" in the obligatory sense. For example, when addressing a prospective juror, Judge
 24 Burns not only told the jurors that they "should" indict if there is probable cause, it told them that if there
 25 is not probable cause, "then the grand jury should hesitate and not indict." See id. at 8. At least in context,
 26 it would strain credulity to suggest that Judge Burns was using "should" for the purpose of "leaving room
 27 for the grand jury to [indict] even if it finds [no] probable cause." See Navarro-Vargas, 408 F.3d at 1205.
 28 Clearly it was not.

1 The full passage cited above effectively eliminates any possibility that Judge Burns intended the 2 Navarro-Vargas spin on the word "should."

3 [T]he grand jury is determining really two factors: "do we have a reasonable belief that a
4 crime was committed? And second, do we have a reasonable belief that the person that they propose that we indict committed the crime?"

5 If the answer is "yes" to both of those, then the case should move forward. If the answer to
6 either of the questions is "no," then the grand jury should not hesitate and not indict.

7 See Ex. B at 8. Of the two sentences containing the word "should," the latter of the two essentially states
8 that if there is no probable cause, you should not indict. Judge Burns could not possibly have intended to 9 "leav[e] room for the grand jury to [indict] even if it finds [no] probable cause." See Navarro-Vargas, 408
10 F.3d at 1205 (citing Marcucci, 299 F.3d at 1159). That would contravene the grand jury's historic role of 11 protecting the innocent. See, e.g., United States v. Calandra, 414 U.S. 338, 343 (1974) (The grand jury's 12 "responsibilities continue to include both the determination whether there is probable cause and the 13 protection of citizens against unfounded criminal prosecutions.") (citation omitted).

14 By the same token, if Judge Burns said that "the case should move forward" if there is probable
15 cause, but intended to "leav[e] room for the grand jury to dismiss even if it finds probable cause," see
16 Navarro-Vargas, 408 F.3d at 1205 (citing Marcucci, 299 F.3d at 1159), then it would have to have intended
17 two different meanings of the word "should" in the space of two consecutive sentences. That could not 18 have been its intent. But even if it were, no grand jury could ever have had that understanding.⁸ Jurors are 19 not presumed to be capable of sorting through internally contradictory instructions. See generally United 20 States v. Lewis, 67 F.3d 225, 234 (9th Cir. 1995) ("where two instructions conflict, a reviewing court 21 cannot presume that the jury followed the correct one") (citation, internal quotations and brackets omitted).

22 Lest there be any room for ambiguity, on no less than four occasions, Judge Burns made it explicitly 23 clear to the grand jurors that "should" was not merely suggestive, but obligatory:

26 ⁸ This argument does not turn on Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga's view that the Navarro-Vargas/Marcucci reading 27 of the word "should" in the model instructions is wildly implausible. Rather, it turns on the context in which 28 the word is employed by Judge Burns in its unique instructions, context which eliminates the Navarro-
Vargas/Marcucci reading as a possibility.

(1) The first occasion occurred in the following exchange when Judge Burns conducted voir dire and excused a potential juror (CSW):

The Court: . . . If there's probable cause, then the case should go forward. I wouldn't want you to say, "Well, yeah, there's probable cause. But I still don't like what the government is doing. I disagree with these laws, so I'm not going to vote for it to go forward." If that's your frame of mind, then probably you shouldn't serve. Only you can tell me that.

Prospective Juror: Well, I think I may fall in that category.

The Court: In the latter category?

Prospective Juror: Yes.

The Court: Where it would be difficult for you to support a charge even if you thought the evidence warranted it?

Prospective Juror: Yes.

The Court: I'm going to excuse you then.

See Ex. B at 17. There was nothing ambiguous about the word "should" in this exchange with a prospective juror. Even if the prospective juror did not like what the government was doing in a particular case, that case "should go forward" and Judge Burns expressly disapproved of any vote that might prevent that. See id. ("I wouldn't want you [to vote against such a case]"). The sanction for the possibility of independent judgment was dismissal, a result that provided full deterrence of that juror's discretion and secondary deterrence as to the exercise of discretion by any other prospective grand juror.

(2) In an even more explicit example of what "should" meant, Judge Burns makes clear that it there is an unbending obligation to indict if there is probable cause. Grand jurors have no other prerogative.

The Court: . . . It's not for me to say, "Well, I don't like it. So I'm not going to follow it here."

You'd have a similar obligation as a grand juror even though you might have to grit your teeth on some cases. Philosophically, if you were a member of Congress, you'd vote against, for example, criminalizing marijuana. I don't know if that's it, but you'd vote against criminalizing some drugs.

That's not what your prerogative is here. Your prerogative instead is act like a judge and to say, "All right. This is what I've got to deal with objectively. Does it seem to me that a crime was committed? Yes. Does it seem to me that this person's involved? It does." And then your obligation, if you find those things to be true, would be to vote in favor of the case going forward.

Id. at 26-27 (emphasis added). After telling this potential juror (REA) what his obligations and prerogatives were, the Court inquired as to whether "you'd be inclined to let people go on drug cases even though you were convinced there was probable cause they committed a drug offense?" Id. at 27. The potential juror responded: "It would depend on the case." Id. Nevertheless, that juror was excused. Id. at

28. Again, in this context, and contrary to the situation in Navarro-Vargas, "should" means "shall"; it is obligatory, and the juror has no prerogative to do anything other than indict if there is probable cause.

Moreover, as this example demonstrates, the issue is not limited to whether the grand jury believes a particular law to be "unwise." This juror said that any decision to indict would not depend on the law, but rather it would "depend on the case." Thus, it is clear that Judge Burns' point was that if a juror could not indict on probable cause for every case, then that juror was not fit for service. It is equally clear that the prospective juror did not dispute the "wisdom of the law;" he was prepared to indict under some factual scenarios, perhaps many. But Judge Burns did not pursue the question of what factual scenarios troubled the prospective jurors, because its message is that there is no discretion not to indict.

(3) As if the preceding examples were not enough, Judge Burns continued to pound the point home that "should" meant "shall" when it told another grand juror during voir dire: "[W]hat I have to insist on is that you follow the law that's given to us by the United States Congress. We enforce the federal laws here." See id. at 61.

(4) And then again, after swearing in all the grand jurors who had already agreed to indict in every case where there was probable cause, Judge Burns reiterated that "should" means "shall" when it reminded them that "your option is not to say 'well, I'm going to vote against indicting even though I think that the evidence is sufficient Instead your obligation is . . . not to bring your personal definition of what the law ought to be and try to impose that through applying it in a grand jury setting." See Ex. A at 9.

Moreover, Judge Burns advised the grand jurors that they were forbidden from considering the penalties to which indicted persons may be subject.

Prospective Juror (REA): ... And as far as being fair, it kind of depends on what the case is about because there is a disparity between state and federal law.

The Court: In what regard?

Prospective Juror: Specifically, medical marijuana.

The Court: Well, those things -- the consequences of your determination shouldn't concern you in the sense that penalties or punishment, things like that -- we tell trial jurors, of course, that they cannot consider the punishment or the consequence that Congress has set for these things. We'd ask you to also abide by that. We want you to make a business-like decision of whether there was a probable cause. ...

See Ex. B at 24-25 (emphasis added). A "business-like decision of whether there was a probable cause" would obviously leave no role for the consideration of penalty information.

1 The Ninth Circuit previously rejected a claim based upon the proscription against consideration of 2 penalty information based upon the same unlikely reading of the word "should" employed in Marcucci.
 3 See United States v. Cortez-Rivera, 454 F.3d 1038, 1040-41 (9th Cir. 2006). Cortez-Rivera is inapposite
 4 for two reasons. First, Judge Burns did not use the term "should" in the passage quoted above. Second,
 5 that context, as well as its consistent use of a mandatory meaning in employing the term, eliminate the 6 ambiguity (if there ever was any) relied upon by Cortez-Rivera. The instructions again violate Vasquez,
 7 which plainly authorized consideration of penalty information. See 474 U.S. at 263.

8 Noting can mask the undeniable fact that Judge Burns explicitly instructed the jurors time and time
 9 again that they had a duty, an obligation, and a singular prerogative to indict each and every case where 10 there was probable cause. These instructions go far beyond the holding of Navarro-Vargas and stand in 11 direct contradiction of the Supreme Court's decision in Vasquez. Indeed, it defies credulity to suggest that 12 a grand juror hearing these instructions, and that voir dire, could possibly believe what the Supreme Court
 13 held in Vasquez:

14 The grand jury does not determine only that probable cause exists to believe that a defendant
 15 committed a crime, or that it does not. In the hands of the grand jury lies the power to charge 16 a greater offense or a lesser offense; numerous counts or a single count; and perhaps most 17 significant of all, a capital offense or a non-capital offense – all on the basis of the same facts.
 Moreover, “[t]he grand jury is not bound to indict in every case where a conviction can be obtained.”

18 474 U.S. at 263 (quoting United States v. Ciambrone, 601 F.2d 616, 629 (2nd Cir. 1979) (Friendly, J., 19 dissenting)); accord Campbell v. Louisiana, 523 U.S. 392, 399 (1998) (The grand jury “controls not only 20 the initial decision to indict, but also significant decisions such as how many counts to charge and whether 21 to charge a greater or lesser offense, including the important decision whether to charge a capital crime.”).
 22 Nor would the January 2007 grand jury ever believe that it was empowered to assess the “the need to 23 indict.” See id. at 264. Judge Burns' grand jury is not Vasquez's grand jury. The instructions therefore 24 represent structural constitutional error “that interferes with the grand jury's independence and the integrity 25 of the grand jury proceeding.” See United States v. Isgro, 974 F.2d 1091, 1094 (9th Cir. 1992). The 26 indictment must therefore be dismissed. Id.

27 The Navarro-Vargas II majority's faith in the structure of the grand jury is not a cure for the 28 instructions excesses. The Navarro-Vargas II majority attributes “[t]he grand jury's discretion -- its

1 independence -- [to] the absolute secrecy of its deliberations and vote and the unreviewability of its
2 decisions." 408 F.3d at 1200. As a result, the majority discounts the effect that a judge's instructions may 3 have on a grand jury because "it is the structure of the grand jury process and its function that make it
4 independent." Id. at 1202 (emphases in the original).

5 Judge Hawkins sharply criticized this approach. The majority, he explains, "believes that the 6 'structure' and 'function' of the grand jury -- particularly the secrecy of the proceedings and unreviewability
7 of many of its decisions -- sufficiently protects that power." See id. at 1214 (Hawkins, J., dissenting). The 8 flaw in the majority's analysis is that "[i]nstructing a grand jury that it lacks power to do anything beyond 9 making a probable cause determination ... unconstitutionally undermines the very structural protections that 10 the majority believes save[] the instruction." Id. After all, it is an "almost invariable assumption of the 11 law that jurors follow their instructions." Id. (quoting Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200, 206 (1987)).
12 If that "invariable assumption" were to hold true, then the grand jurors could not possibly fulfill the role 13 described in Vasquez. Indeed, "there is something supremely cynical about saying that it is fine to give 14 jurors erroneous instructions because nothing will happen if they disobey them." Id.

15 In setting forth Judge Hawkins' views, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga understands that this Court may not adopt
16 them solely because the reasoning that supports them is so much more persuasive than the majority's
17 sophistry. Rather, he sets them forth to urge the Court not to extend what is already untenable reasoning.

18 Here, again, the question is not an obscure interpretation of the word "should", especially in light
19 of the instructions and commentary by Judge Burns during voir dire discussed above - unaccounted for by 20 the Court in Navarro-Vargas II because they had not yet been disclosed to the defense, but an absolute ban
21 on the right to refuse to indict that directly conflicts with the recognition of that right in Vasquez, 22 Campbell, and both Navarro-Vargas II opinions. Navarro-Vargas II is distinguishable on that basis, but 23 not only that.

24 Judge Burns did not limit himself to denying the grand jurors the power that Vasquez plainly states
25 they enjoy. It also excused prospective grand jurors who might have exercised that Fifth Amendment
26 prerogative, excusing "three [jurors] in this case, because they could not adhere to [that] principle...." See 27 Ex. A at 8; Ex. B at 17, 28. The structure of the grand jury and the secrecy of its deliberations cannot 28 embolden grand jurors who are no longer there, likely because they expressed their willingness to act as the conscience of the community. See Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d at 1210-11 (Hawkins, J., dissenting) (a grand jury exercising its powers under Vasquez "serves ... to protect the accused from the other branches of government by acting as the 'conscience of the community.'") (quoting Gaither v. United States, 413 F.2d 1061, 1066 & n.6 (D.C. Cir. 1969)). The federal courts possess only "very limited" power "to fashion, on their own initiative, rules of grand jury procedure," United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36, 50 (1992), and, here, Judge Burns has both fashioned its own rules and enforced them.

D. The Instructions Conflict with Williams' Holding That There Is No Duty to Present Exculpatory Evidence to the Grand Jury.

In Williams, the defendant, although conceding that it was not required by the Fifth Amendment, argued that the federal courts should exercise their supervisory power to order prosecutors to disclose exculpatory evidence to grand jurors, or, perhaps, to find such disclosure required by Fifth Amendment common law. See 504 U.S. at 45, 51. Williams held that "as a general matter at least, no such 'supervisory' judicial authority exists." See id. at 47. Indeed, although the supervisory power may provide the authority "to dismiss an indictment because of misconduct before the grand jury, at least where that misconduct amounts to a violation of one of those 'few, clear rules which were carefully drafted and approved by this Court and by Congress to ensure the integrity of the grand jury's functions,'" id. at 46 (citation omitted), it does not serve as "a means of prescribing such standards of prosecutorial conduct in the first instance." Id. at 47 (emphasis added). The federal courts possess only "very limited" power "to fashion, on their own initiative, rules of grand jury procedure." Id. at 50. As a consequence, Williams rejected the defendant's claim, both as an exercise of supervisory power and as Fifth Amendment common law. See id. at 51-55.

Despite the holding in Williams, the instructions here assure the grand jurors that prosecutors would present to them evidence that tended to undercut probable cause. See Ex. A at 20.

Now, again, this emphasizes the difference between the function of the grand jury and the trial jury. You're all about probable cause. If you think that there's evidence out there that might cause you say "well, I don't think probable cause exists," then it's incumbent upon you to hear that evidence as well. As I told you, in most instances, the U.S. Attorneys are duty-bound to present evidence that cuts against what they may be asking you to do if they're aware of that evidence.

Id. (emphasis added). Moreover, the district court later returned to the notion of the prosecutors and their duties, advising the grand jurors that they "can expect that the U.S. Attorneys that will appear in from of 1 [them] will be candid, they'll be honest, and ... they'll act in good faith in all matters presented to you." See

 2 id. at 27. The Ninth Circuit has already concluded it is likely this final comment is "unnecessary." See 3 Navarro-Vargas, 408 F.3d at 1207.

4 This particular instruction has a devastating effect on the grand jury's protective powers, particularly 5 if it is not true. It begins by emphasizing the message that Navarro-Vargas II somehow concluded was not
 6 conveyed by the previous instruction: "You're all about probable cause." See Ex. A at 20. Thus, once
 7 again, the grand jury is reminded that they are limited to probable cause determinations (a reminder that 8 was probably unnecessary in light of the fact that Judge Burns had already told the grand jurors that they 9 likely would be excused if they rejected this limitation). The instruction goes on to tell the grand jurors
 10 that they should consider evidence that undercuts probable cause, but also advises the grand jurors that the 11 prosecutor will present it. The end result, then, is that grand jurors should consider evidence that goes 12 against probable cause, but, if none is presented by the government, they can presume that there is none.
 13 After all, "in most instances, the U.S. Attorneys are duty-bound to present evidence that cuts against what 14 they may be asking you to do if they're aware of that evidence." See id. Moreover, during voir dire, Judge 15 Burns informed the jurors that "my experience is that the prosecutors don't play hide-the-ball. If there's 16 something adverse or that cuts against the charge, you'll be informed of that. They have a duty to do that."
 17 See Ex. B at 14-15 (emphasis added). Thus, if the exculpatory evidence existed, it necessarily would have 18 been presented by the "duty-bound" prosecutor, because the grand jurors "can expect that the U.S.
 19 Attorneys that will appear in from of [them] will be candid, they'll be honest, and ... they'll act in good faith
 20 in all matters presented to you." See Ex. A at 27.

21 These instructions create a presumption that, in cases where the prosecutor does not present
 22 exculpatory evidence, no exculpatory evidence exists. A grand juror's reasoning, in a case in which no 23 exculpatory evidence was presented, would proceed along these lines:

- 24 (1) I have to consider evidence that undercuts probable cause.
- 25 (2) The candid, honest, duty-bound prosecutor would, in good faith, have presented any such evidence to me, if it existed.
- 26 (3) Because no such evidence was presented to me, I may conclude that there is none.

1 Even if some exculpatory evidence were presented, a grand juror would necessarily presume that the 2 evidence presented represents the universe of all available exculpatory evidence; if there was more, the 3 duty-bound prosecutor would have presented it.

4 The instructions, therefore, discourage investigation -- if exculpatory evidence were out there, the 5 prosecutor would present it, so investigation is a waste of time -- and provide additional support to every 6 probable cause determination: i.e., this case may be weak, but I know that there is nothing on the other side
 7 of the equation because it was not presented. A grand jury so badly misguided is no grand jury at all under 8 the Fifth Amendment and, accordingly, the indictment should be dismissed.

9 V.

10 THIS COURT SHOULD SUPPRESS ALL EVIDENCE BECAUSE IT WAS OBTAINED IN 11 VIOLATION OF THE FOURTH AMENDMENT

12 The warrantless search of the sealed trailer hauled by Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga is presumptively
 13 unreasonable and the government has not shown that the search was supported by probable cause. This 14 court should suppress all evidence (including statements and evidence seized) arising from the illegal
 15 search.²

16 A. Probable Cause was Required to Conduct a Warrantless Search of Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga's
 17 Vehicle at the Highway 86 Checkpoint.

18 The Fourth Amendment's balance of reasonableness is qualitatively different at international ports
 19 of entry than at immigration checkpoints removed from the border. See United States v. Montoya de 20 Hernandez, 473 U.S. 531, 538 (1985). At international ports of entry, "routine searches of the persons and 21 effects of entrants are not subject to any requirement of reasonable suspicion, probable cause, or warrant."
 22 Id. In contrast, the Supreme Court has clearly held that at Border Patrol "checkpoints removed from the 23 border and its functional equivalents, officers may not search private vehicles without consent or probable 24 cause." United States v. Ortiz, 422 U.S. 891, 896-97 (1975).

25 In Ortiz, the Supreme Court considered whether a vehicle search at a Border Patrol checkpoint
 26 located 62 air miles north of the Mexican border must be supported by probable cause. Id. at 892-93. The 27 ² At a minimum, this Court should hold an evidentiary hearing to require the Government to establish 28 probable cause to justify the warrantless search.

1 Court “rejected the government’s contention that the Nation’s strong interest in controlling immigration
 2 and the practical difficulties of policing the Mexican border combined to justify dispensing with both 3 warrant and probable cause for vehicle searches” at traffic checkpoints near the border. Id. at 892, 896-97.
 4 Emphasizing that “a search, even of an automobile, is a substantial invasion of privacy,” the Court held that
 5 any such search at a Border Patrol checkpoint removed from the border is invalid in the absence of probable
 6 cause. Id. at 896, 898.

7 Like the Border Patrol checkpoint at issue in Ortiz, the Highway 86 Border Patrol checkpoint is 8 removed from the border and its functional equivalents, such as international airports. In fact, it is located
 9 about 36 air miles north of the Mexican border. Bowen, 422 U.S. at 917. Accordingly, a vehicle search 10 at the Highway 86 Border Patrol checkpoint is invalid in the absence of probable cause.

11 B. The Government Has Not Established Probable Cause to Search the Vehicle.

12 The Court must suppress the evidence seized pursuant to the unlawful search of the vehicle. The 13 vehicle was searched without a warrant. That search is therefore presumptively unreasonable. See United 14 States v. Hawkins, 249 F.3d 867, 872 (9th Cir. 2001). It is the government’s burden to demonstrate that 15 its agents complied with the Fourth Amendment. See id.

16 A canine sniff can supply the probable cause necessary for a search only if the canine’s reliability
 17 has been established. United States v. Lingenfelter, 997 F.2d 632, 639 (9th Cir. 1993) (citing United States 18 v. Spetz, 721 F.2d 1457, 1464 (9th Cir. 1983)). In Lingenfelter, the court found that probable cause existed 19 to conduct a search based on an alert by a canine, but only after review of evidence establishing the 20 canine’s reliability. Id. at 639. The evidence provided to support the canine’s reliability was substantial:

21 Carlos [the canine] and Officer Fleet have participated in approximately 300 hours of training
 22 searches, and [] Carlos has never given a false alert or failed to detect the drug and narcotic
 23 training aids that Carlos was asked to find. In all, Carlos has performed approximately 500 investigations and has been successfully relied upon in the past to sniff out narcotics.

24 Id. (emphasis added). In the absence of evidence establishing a particular canine’s reliability in detecting 25 the contraband at issue, a canine sniff and alert does not supply the probable cause necessary for a 26 warrantless search. See id. at 639.

27 In this case, the government has not met its burden of establishing probable cause to justify a 28 warrantless search of the sealed trailer. Bare assertions about a canine alert to the trailer do not supply

1 probable cause in the absence of evidence establishing the canine's reliability. If the court is disinclined
2 to suppress the fruits of this presumptively unreasonable search, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga respectfully requests
3 an evidentiary hearing on the issue of probable cause to search the vehicle and sealed trailer.

4 VI.

5 THIS COURT SHOULD SUPPRESS THE STATEMENTS OF ALL UNAVAILABLE
6 WITNESSES

7 Pursuant to Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004), this Court should suppress the statements
8 of all unavailable witnesses, including the statements given by the seventeen alleged undocumented aliens
9 who were not retained as material witnesses. If the government intends to introduce statements by any of 10 these witnesses, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga requests notice specifying exactly what statements they seek to admit 11 at least three weeks prior to trial so that the admissibility of the statements can be litigated in advance of 12 trial.

13 VII.

14 MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE ADDITIONAL MOTIONS

15 Defense counsel has received 126 pages of discovery in this case as of filing the instant motions.
16 As information comes to light, due to the government providing additional discovery in response to these 17 motions or an order of this Court, the defense may find it necessary to file further motions. It is, therefore,
18 requested that defense counsel be allowed the opportunity to file further motions based upon information
19 gained through the discovery process.

20 VIII.

21 CONCLUSION

22 For these and all the foregoing reasons, the defendant, Mr. Alfaro-Zuniga, respectfully requests that 23 this Court grant his motions and grant any and all other relief deemed proper and fair.

24 Respectfully submitted,
